Dear colleagues and friends,

It’s a real pleasure for us to inform you about our 19th World Congress of the World Association for Dynamic Psychiatry (WADP) that is going to be held in Berlin, Germany, March 31-April 4, 2020. On the topic “Peace and Aggression – A Social Challenge for Psychiatry and Psychotherapy”.

The topic of the Congress goes beyond the specific medical problems and concerns the global social problems of the modern world, because mental health is inseparable from the social environment and value based care can be only provided by specific attention to the issues of peace, tolerance, security and respect to human rights. By building inclusive societies free of stigmatization for mentally ill.

The founder of the WADP, Professor Günter Ammon, is known for his struggle for peace as a citizen and his creation of a new aggression concept as a scientist. He introduced the definition of the constructive aggression, which is defined as the capacity to be active, determined, self-confident, to be capable to invest in reciprocity and trust in this sense to live in peace with oneself and others.

On the other hand the implemented deficient aggression theory by G. Ammon assumes the lack of self-assured behavioural skills, the impaired ability to regulate inner tension, the inner accumulation of frustration that can bring the tragic outburst of violence with a great number of innocent victims. That means that speaking about aggression, we as mental health specialists, should emphasize in our discussion not only the problems of the aggressive behaviour of seriously mentally ill, but the late inner tension, the inner accumulation of frustration aggression theory.

This theme has special relevance to the field of dynamic psychiatry and psychotherapy. Furthermore it is a topic which people have to deal with daily. Understanding “constructive aggression” as an inhe-rrent developmental force in human beings, is a matter that occupied Günter Ammon even as early as 1970. He showed, that this force can become destructive or deficient only through inter-personal group-dependent developmental energy. He thereby detached himself from old vectorial and reductionist, and his theories established the basis for a humanistic view of aggression serving peace. To quote G. Ammon: “Peace means living, loving, working for oneself and others, having joy and resting in oneself, being content with oneself as well as being able to lead a life that is interesting for others within the framework of the possibilities that are set individually for all of us by the dispositions of society as a whole … with the possibility of changing social conditions within the scope of our strength and in solidarity with others” (Ammon 1986).

In a world where people continue to be confronted by many challenges, including wars throughout the world, as well as the effects of climate change and the threat to the environment, we as psychiatrists, psychologists, psychotherapists, and social educators are particularly called upon to deal with this issue. In an article entitled “Freedom is wonderful – and vulnerable,” which appeared in the newspaper “Tagesspiegel” on November 8, 2018, the social scientist and politician of the Green Party Ralf Fucks stated: “Freedom is wonderful and exhausting at the same time. A person who wants to live in a self-determined way must take responsibility, too … The future of an open society will depend on whether we can master the great challenges of our time – times of turbulent change, in which old professional and cultural certainties are dissolving, there is a growing need for community based on solidarity.”

This Congress will therefore be about understanding the roots and dynamics of aggression. While constructive aggression furthers responsibility and solidarity, destructive aggression destroys them. What possibilities can we develop for psychiatric and psychotherapeutic treatment for dealing with aggression, conflict resolution and even the ability to live in peace? Congress topics will also be suicide and self-aggression. Processes for developing peace skills in psychotherapy and psychoanalysis will always call for new thinking, new research findings and new aspects of treatment for activating and creating, arrested and destructive development destiny. The common interest running through our Congress will be to find new possibilities, hypotheses, assumptions, and new creative conditions in our rapidly changing world.

We hope that the encounter between scientists from various disciplines such as medicine, psychiatry, psychotherapy, psychoanalysis and psychotherapy can promote the integration of interdisciplinary research. We also seek to have interdisciplinary findings from sociology, philosophy, pedagogy, cultural anthropology a.o. and areas of research to the discourse on this topic. It is our wish to have those humanities to contribute to the 2020 WADP Congress in a way that it’s possible for problems related to aggression and freedom to be perceived, consolidated, and addressed on behalf of our patients.

Again, we would like to thank the international organizations – WPA World Psychiatric Association, WASP World Association for Social Psychiatry, WPHM World Federation for Mental Health, IPCMC International College for Person Centered Medicine, IFE Fromm International Foundation Erich Fromm and DGG Deutsches Gesellschaft für Gruppypedagogik und Gruppenpsychotherapie – for their support.

We greatly look forward to welcome you in Berlin, a city that has shown how to overcome politically imposed division and how to enable its people to grow together again.
