INTRODUCTION

Dear colleagues and friends,

Dynamic psychiatry as a holistic approach to understanding mental health and illness has always emphasized the importance of the group, the partnership approach, the shared decision-making, the involvement of the patients not only in therapy but also in the mutual spiritual social-energetic exchange in its scientific research and daily clinical practice. It is with great pleasure that we observe that after several decades of our putting in effort and hard work, these ideas have become widely recognized. This is evidenced by the fact that the WPA, of which the WADP has been an affiliated member for many years, published an article in one of its most recent issues on the “lived experience of psychosis.” This article is the first review of this disorder that is co-written by patients, as experts by experience, and academics, as professionals respected around the world. We have always made it a point to provide our patients with the opportunity to be a part of our world congress, and I very much hope that it will be a valuable contribution to the program this time, as well.

More recently, a new paradigm has been gradually emerging: the healthcare ecosystem. It encompasses four main dimensions: the places and communities in which we live; a broad set of demographic and wider social variables; health lifestyles; and the provision of healthcare. We also observe the appearance of new terms like ‘public health expo some’ or ‘envirome.’ The body of research focused on bridging the knowledge gap between basic sciences and the real world and on understanding that the biological mechanisms of the psychosocial factors have an impact on health and resilience is constantly growing. The provision of a facilitating environment for mental patients is considered to be a new evidence-based challenge for mental-health specialists. As Günter Ammon postulated: Man fell ill in groups and needed a set of groups in the treatment system to recover. Dynamic psychiatry, as a person-centered humanistic approach with a deep multidimensional understanding of the group dynamics at different levels, including not only families but big social groups and societies, can be considered the most demanded approach to facing the social challenges of our time.

Nevertheless, social issues such as stigmatization, discrimination, and social exclusion continue to be a serious problem for mental healthcare. The dynamic of the environment in which we live is complicated, and we need to combine our efforts to tackle these problems. The congress will offer a place for fruitful exchange and a platform to create and establish networks, collaborations, and partnerships.

“No man is an island, Entire of itself”, John Donne wrote, meaning that the world in which we live is our shared responsibility. I expect that the congress will be a place to exchange practical experiences and scientific innovations – an exchange that will target a gap in mental health services. It will provide empowerment through an understanding of the phenomena of unconscious group dynamics in society. My hope is that it will galvanize existing efforts at building a more inclusive world and better mental healthcare systems all over the world.

We cordially invite you to participate in our congress and make your contribution to this topic. We are very much looking forward to meeting you in Marrakech.

Professor Nikolaj G. Neznanov
President World Association
for Dynamic Psychiatry

Dear colleagues and friends,

it is my great pleasure and honour to welcome you to the 20th World Congress of WADP and the 33rd International Symposium of the German Academy for Psychoanalysis (DAP) in Marrakech. We are very happy to have the opportunity to come together, especially after the last conference had to be canceled due to the Corona pandemic.

The motivation for this World congress with the topic “Social Challenges – Shared Responsibility in Psychiatry and Psychotherapy” is to find out the backgrounds of the processes of conflict arisal, conflict dynamics and their solutions as well as their overall context in which they become effective, dealing with fear of contact and interpersonal threats; the development of a capacity for peace, solidarity, identity and group cohesion.

We will be focusing on the conflicts and problems by various societal, professional and social groups, both internally and in their interactions with each other. In delineating them and reflecting on them, we will come to an understanding of the conflict resolution processes applied and the outcomes they have achieved.

In this context, it is of utmost importance, in our view, to avoid narratives underpinned by a friend-or-foe dichotomy and destructive scapegoat dynamics – instead, we should accept responsibility, together, for resolving the issues we encounter in our lives as humans.

This means for scientists and practitioners of psychotherapy, psychoanalysis, group analysis, and in fact all psychiatric approaches to find solutions for how to come to terms with conflicts and to counteract dehumanizing emotional and social divisions.

This congress will also integrate and deal with the topics of world-wide social problems and challenges like climate crisis, wars, the spread of new pandemics, increasing isolation of people due to digitalization, famines, forced displacement and migrations, the increasing division in the world between the rich and the poor, etc.

In this context, taking on shared responsibility for our patients means taking a clear point of view and searching for innovative solutions that will make the world a place worth living in, seen both from the individual perspective and as a whole.

We hope that the results of this interdisciplinary approach of medicine, psychology, psychiatry, psychotherapy, sociology, philosophy, pedagogics, cultural anthropology and others certainly will be able to promote the integration of interdisciplinary research and will enhance the discourse on the topics concerned.

We believe these contributions from the humanities to the 2024 WADP World Congress will allow the specific problems associated with the social challenges we will need to overcome to be perceived, consolidated, and addressed in the best interests of our patients.

At this juncture, we would like to thank the following international organizations for their support: World Psychiatric Association WPA, World Association for Social Psychiatry WASP, World Federation for Mental Health WFMH, World Federation for Psychotherapy WFP, International College for Person Centered Medicine ICPCM, Deutsche Gesellschaft für Gruppendynamik und Gruppenpsychotherapie DGG, International Foundation Erich Fromm IFE Fromm and ALFAPSY Alternative Fédérative des Associations de Psychiatrie.

We greatly look forward to welcoming you in Marrakech!
